Aged Woods' President Certified as LEED AP

March 18, 2009 – Aged Woods®, a leading manufacturer of reclaimed, remilled antique wood flooring, has announced that its president/owner, Jeffrey Horn, has been certified by the United States Green Building Council (USGBC) as a Leadership in Energy and Environmental Design Accredited Professional (LEED AP). Professional LEED accreditation distinguishes Horn and Aged Woods as having a thorough understanding of the LEED rating system including credit requirements, submittals and strategies. LEED AP's are highly knowledgeable about the green built environment and are familiar with LEED resources and processes.

Aged Woods brand flooring is precision milled from old, destined for the dump barn wood. Proper kiln drying before milling assures stable, durable wood flooring. The look of Aged Woods antique flooring is natural, offering authentic rustic character from a century or two of weathering and old-time craftsmanship. The specification of Aged Woods' products can contribute LEED points towards new construction building projects. In addition to Aged Woods reclaimed wood flooring, the company also offers non-recycled wood flooring under the Yesteryear Floorworks Co. brand. Yesteryear™ wood flooring is made from specially selected, recently harvested wood. It is available in wide widths and longer lengths which are not possible with reclaimed wood.
